ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The Museums Department of the Colonial Government produced a survey of 20 September 1930 by Charles Zammit. I am grateful that the Director of Fine Arts Museum in Valletta granted permission to R G Kirkpatrick to reproduce the alphabetical lists of inscriptions from this survey and the map. I am grateful to the National Museum of Archaeology and Mr. Stephen C. Spiteri for permission to reproduce photographs of the bastions.
Our special thanks are due to Mr Charles Zammit, former Director of Museums, without whose pioneering work this research could not have been undertaken.

FOREWORD

Hidden in a sunken garden behind the Floriana fortifications of Valletta, lies a fine example of British funerary art of the first half of the 19th Century, Msida Bastion Cemetery. After it became disused, it unfortunately fell a prey to neglect and vandalism.

In 1983 R. G. Kirkpatrick was asked, as a member of the Council of Din L-Art Helwa, the national trust of Malta, to research the cemetery and supervise its clearance. He dedicated to the task many hours and days of the last years of his life, both on the site and in his study as well as among the archives of churches and libraries.

Kirkpatrick discovered on the inscriptions left on site and in the burial registers, a whole mine of information to which he did full justice. Here are to be found references to families and personalities of the time which should prove of interest to historians, genealogists and collectors of Melitensia.

I take pride in having led Reginald to the English Burial Register in Malta to locate the final resting place of Mikiel Anton Vassalli " the father of the Maltese language". I had also told him that the material he had collected had the makings of an interesting book. This book is now born.

Reg and I were close friends and colleagues. I am glad and grateful therefore that his son-in-law helped by his daughter and Peggy his widow, has written the history of the cemetery. Apart from the inherent value of this book, it is a fitting memorial to a wonderful man.

Reg Kirkpatrick was a Chartered Accountant by profession. The material in this book represents his final and finest audit, one which reveals in a typically factual understated way a sad loss to Malta's heritage, but a loss which can be partlv made good if the work on the conversion of the neglected cemetery into a public garden for users of the nearby library, as was his wish and as he was authoritatively promised, will some day be completed.

THE RESEARCH OF R G KIRKPATRICK

Reg Kirkpatrick retired to Malta with his wife Peggy, in January 1972 after his long career as a Chartered Accountant and latterly as Secretary to the Finance Houses Association.

In 1974, he was persuaded by the then Hon. Secretary of Din L-Art Helwa to become a member of the Council and soon became involved in a number of projects including the restoration of the St. Paul's Bay Tower and the Wignacourt Fountain in Valletta. The sad neglect of the Msida Bastion Cemetery was raised at a council meeting and it was agreed to form a project committee to see what could be done. Reg became chairman of the sub committee and set about organising a campaign to persuade the authorities to save what remained, with the possible aim of forming a garden there. In a letter to the Times of Malta (3 January 1986) Walter Zahra, the Hon. Secretary of Din L-Art Helwa, announced the appointment:-

"I wish to inform all interested that Din L-Art Helwa has been worried about this state of affairs (the state of the cemetery) so it has appointed a sub committee under the chairmanship of Mr R G Kirkpatrick who has done some marvellous researches both here and in London".

Reg's enthusiasm and meticulous style prompted him to visit the cemetery regularly and to delve amongst the jumbled stones seeking inscriptions and recording all that he could find. He gathered a filing drawer full of papers and cuttings and carried on a wide and international correspondence with others who were interested in those who were buried there.

At the beginning of 1989, he remarked to his wife that he had researched as far as he was able with the project and his next task was to write it up. He had previously published a small pamphlet on St. Paul's Anglican Pro-Cathedral and one can imagine it might have been in similar style albeit much longer. Writing in the Times of Malta on 18 October 1988 he said:-

"It is hoped to produce in due course a list of burials showing not only the names and dates of burial, but also details of such monumental inscriptions as can be deciphered, supplemented with information about the persons in question derived from many other sources".(12)

Sadly on February 7, he died before he could realise that next step. As his son-in-law, I have sought to bring together his material into a form that may be of use to future researchers and thereby place on record, many years of painstaking work.

INTRODUCTION

In 1930 Captain Charles Zammit (Later Director of the Museum) was given verbal instructions to carry out a survey of the Msida Bastion Cemetery, the burial ground for members of the Protestant communities in Malta. He published his findings soon after together with some photographs, drawings and a plan for the benefit of scholars. His plan which divides the cemetery into three zones (a, b, c) shows some 269 graves. The lists show 439 names grouped under the three zones. As a result of the research by the late Reg Kirkpatrick, the total number of entries rose to some 528. Some graves contain several individuals, though some are memorials to those who were buried elsewhere.

The research by Zammit was based on the grave stones whereas Kirkpatrick supplemented his research by analysis of the parish records and other sources (see references). Kirkpatrick also found that some of the names and other details had become inaccurate in translation and these have been corrected. For example:- 'it would appear from this survey that the latest (burial took place) in 1886 (tomb No. 221) zone c.' (19). From Kirkpatrick's research it would appear that this is incorrect as No. 221, Henry Jellico, died on 6 December 1836. The latest is Sarah Smith who died on 4 November 1880. The earliest appears to be Lieut. Richard Russell Rawlings who died on 14 December 1806. This is doubtful and the next earliest is John Morris who died on 19 May 1808. The majority of deaths took place in the period 1820 to 1860. It is likely therefore that we now have as complete a record as possible of those laid to rest in this cemetery.

This booklet has been prepared from the papers in the possession of R G Kirkpatrick at the time of his death.

THE BASTIONS AT FLORIANA.

The Msida Bastion is located behind the former Lintorn Barracks at Floriana(2). The bastion is part of the Floriana Lines conceived in order to provide further protection to the Valletta landfront.

They were designed by the Italian engineer Pietro Paolo Floriani during the Magistracy of the Grand Master Antoine de Paule (1622- 36).

"The whole Floriani project encountered much criticism. Some Knights actually resigned due to the controversy that arose when the Council sanctioned its construction on 10 December 1635. The opponents of this scheme strongly believed that the Valletta landfront could have been more effectively protected if its outerworks were completed and the bastions provided with counterguards,... But despite all the criticism levelled upon it, no influence was ever exerted and the work on the new fortifications was continued."(13)

Later, the Knights turned to two French engineers, De Tigne and Mondion, to help complete the work and they pointed out that the weakest point lay in the flanks. The engineer proposed the construction of retrenchments which provided protection for troops retreating from the Floriana lines into the city. The retrenchments were built above the Msida and Quarantine Bastions.

These Bastions saw action twice; once, when Napoleon's forces bombarded the walls for an hour in 1798 and again, in the second world war. In 1940, an AA gun position was placed on the Quarantine Bastion for the defence of the submarine base at Lazzaretto Creek.

A HISTORY OF THE MSIDA BASTION CEMETERY

From as early as 1806, there is evidence of burials at the Msida Bastion for members of the Protestant Communities in Malta. Controversy surrounds the exact date when it was formally opened as a cemetery. This debate has been fuelled by the confusing fact of there being two cemeteries used at the same time. It has been claimed that: "The Senior Citizens of Floriana ..held the view that the Msida Bastion Cemetery was never a new cemetery but only an extension of that at the Quarantine Bastion adding that the authorities of the time had in mind the idea of taking over the two cemeteries to form one large Memorial Park. No documentary evidence has ever been found for this view." 30.11.86 (12)

Known as the English Burial Ground, the Msida Bastion Cemetery began in the 1830's, to supersede the Quarantine Cemetery which had been opened in 1801. The Msida Bastion Cemetery comprises three levels, designated by Charles Zammit in his survey dated 20 September 1930, as zones a, b and c.

In this vicinity, there were five burial grounds in all, 1.5.66 (12) the earliest being known as the Rock Gate Cemetery. The others were the Msida, Quarantine, Cholera and Greek Orthodox. Whilst those buried are predominantly English who were associated with the armed forces and civil administration, others who were not members of the Catholic communion but who had some claim, were also buried there.

The most famous Maltese believed to be buried there was Mikiel Anton Vassalli who died on 12 January 1829, though much debate still surrounds his burial site. In the burial record of St Paul's Anglican Pro - Cathedral there is the following entry:- "13 January 1829. On this day was (sic) interred the remains of Michele Antonio Vassalli supposed to be about 64 years old, by me (signed) John Cleugh, Chaplain to Government." Various claims have been made about his resting place including the Quarantine Bastion(2) and even Ta'Braxia(2) which was opened in 1856. The importance to R G Kirkpatrick of establishing Vassalli's resting place was evident:-

"How splendid if we could find this during the clearance of the site! This is clearly a matter which may influence Government in any decision to formulate a scheme."(11)

By 1840 when an engraving appeared in the Malta Penny Magazine the cemetery had become established with many substantial tombstones and memorials. Alongside was the earlier Quarantine Bastion Burial ground which was largely destroyed by bombing during the second world war in April 1942 and the rubble cleared afterwards to make way for the Excelsior Hotel.

In 1838 the first edition of 'Malta and Gozo' by George Badger referred to the Msida Bastion Cemetery thus:- "about ten years ago a third cemetery was opened with flowers and trees and containing many sumptuous monuments". (15) This is probably the source of the view that it was opened in 1828.

In 1839 a guide book said:-
"Under the inner line wall of Floriana, looking into the Quarantine Harbour, is the Protestant burying ground, in the platforms of the outer bastions, and as fast as one bastion fills up, another is appropriated, and it is truly astonishing how fast they do fill up. There are many illustrious and lamented characters there mouldering into dust. In one of these was buried the elegant Poet of Ionia, the Prince of Masons, and the best of men, Walter Rodwell Wright, late President of Her Majesty's Courts on the Island. The grave of Wright may be discovered (as left by the Sexton) near to that costly monument erected to the memory of Mr James Bell, a merchant, whose death was occasioned by a fall from his horse in 1823. In the new burying ground lie the remains of the late Countess Dowager of Erroll, lady of His Excellency the Right Honourable John H. Frere, a beautiful mausoleum is put over her ladyship's grave of Carrara marble. Here also lie the remains of Vice-Admiral Sir Henry Hotham, Commander in Chief of our Mediterranean Fleet and of a beautiful snowdrop(sic), cut off as it opened, who can never be thought of but with a tear and a sigh; all these grounds are covered with handsome monuments and pretty epitaphs."(25)

In 1842, the Rev Charles Rockwell of the US Navy wrote a book entitled: 'Sketches of Foreign Travel and Life at Sea'. About Malta and the cemetery he wrote:- "Every night one may see whole families men, women and children, sleeping on the pavement of the streets, and even the tabular monuments in the old English burying ground have been broken in at one end in order to furnish a nightly resting place for these poor homeless vagabonds."

Vandalism was a problem long before our current day. In 1886 the cemetery at Ta'Braxia was opened as the Msida was now largely full. The analysis of the ages of those buried in the Msida Bastion is a stark reminder of youth mortality. Of the 375 ages that are known, 175 were 20 and under. Of these 67 were under a year old. However Dr John Allen the oldest recorded, died at the age of 94 and there were 27 over 70.

By 1910 the Msida Bastion Cemetery had become neglected and its deterioration has continued to this day. The monuments have been raided for the marble and stone carvings, the grounds have been vandalised and the undergrowth has grown unchecked. (see Times of Malta 20 March 1985 which says that a piece of marble raided from the cemetery was used to form part of a plinth for a plaque commemorating 'Day of the Handicapped').

In the 1920s responsibility for the cemetery passed to the Malta Government which prompted the report by Charles Zammit. At one time there was a guardian but for many years it was left untended until the last few years when with the aid of Din L-Art Helwa, the cemetery was fitted with a lockable gate and the wall strengthened to keep it secure. Work was also started to clear the undergrowth with the aim of making it into a garden. This was the subject of a report by R G Kirkpatrick in 1984.(5). A writer in 1986 quoting the Zammit report described the cemetery in lyrical terms:-

"we find that stately pines and cypresses and other trees grow haphazardly without restraint as they lack a gardener's loving care. A luxuriant undergrowth of irises, periwinkles and nettles cover the graves and a hardy ivy and other parasites have crept insidiously into the joints of the graves and gradually split them in pieces."(2)

In January 1988, Judge M. Caruana Curran, President of Din L-Art Helwa, showed Dr Ugo Mifsud Bonnici the state of the cemetery and mentioning that Anton Vassalli was likely to have been buried there, urged the Minister to take action to preserve the site. In August 1988 (12) Dr Ugo Mifsud Bonnici, Education Minister, announced that the Msida Bastion Cemetery would be restored for use as a garden.

In the week before Reg Kirkpatrick's death he wrote of a meeting on 2 February 1989 which clearly sets out the vision for the future of Msida Bastion Cemetery:-

" Met Joe Borg (Head of Gardens, Department of Environment). Chris Spiteri (Department of Environment) turned up with a new chain and padlock - Joe Borg given a key. Went over the whole of the upper part of zone a containing both Frere monuments deciding where paths should go, seats be placed, which stones to move and which monuments to retain, etc. Propose to pave an area at J.H.F.'s monument and make this a focal point. Agreed that D.L.H. should now consider the restoration of the two Frere monuments. Joe Borg proposes that the first part should be completed before tackling other areas. The garden could then be opened to that extent with the remainder roped off. This has the advantage that people can see the previous state of the cemetery. The first stage would be all of zone a on both sides of the central path up to and including J.H.F.'s monument, together with the whole of zone b. The second stage would be the transformation of the remainder of zone a beyond JHF monument. The third and final stage would be dealing with zone c. During our discussions Joe Borg made rough plans of Susannah's plot (to the right of the path) and John's plot (to the left of the path). Paths will as far as possible be made of stone slabs. "(11)

A SELECTION OF INSCRIPTIONS TOGETHER WITH A BRIEF HISTORY OF SOME OF THE NOTABLE INDIVIDUALS BURIED THERE

The cemetery contains the remains of many who were famous in their day. Some are remembered for more humble achievements:-

"In our visit to the English graveyard we were accompanied by a young gentleman resident in Malta who called our attention to the fact that in a large section of this enclosure the occupants of these graves were persons who had died between the ages of twenty and thirty five. A vast multitude of the young seem to have been laid upon this hallowed spot of earth to tell the careless passer-by that this world is not his home - that the destroyer is abroad - and that health and youth are no security against the mortal shafts that he carries in his quiver! As we passed along over these ashes of the silent dead, our young friend pointed to a particular grave and said; 'There sleeps Mr... he was a fine fellow. I have played whist with him a hundred times; he held a good hand. He used to sit up rather late for a man who has a family waiting for him. I hope however these errors are forgiven, and that none of these things now weigh against him!' Need I tell you my feelings were shocked at these remarks? I went to the stone that stood over his grave and read the record of his age; he died at fifty five. I could not but think, what a sad association of ideas with a man's grave - 'he held a good hand at whist'(27)

JAMES G MACDONALD BUCHAN(N?)AN (No. 66)
'Sacred to the memory of James G. Macdonald Buchanan youngest and only remaining son of Hector Macdonald Buchanan of Drummakill and Ross, Scotland Esquire who died of consumption the 20th day of May 1828 aged 22 years. Impelled by his cruel disease which already had proved fatal to his four brothers he came to Malta on his way to England in the hope a change of air might arrest the progress of his malady and enable longer to cheer the declining years of his beloved and afflicted parents'.

LADY ERROLL (No. 150)
Lady Erroll was born Elizabeth Jemima Blake, daughter of Joseph Blake of Ardfry, County Galway, Ireland. On 25 January 1790 she married George, 16th Earl of Erroll. Having inadvertently disclosed a secret entrusted to him by Mr. Pitt, the Earl committed suicide on a point of honour on 14 June 1798. The widowed Countess of Erroll married secondly the Rt. Hon John Hookham Frere. In 1822 after 'the massacre of Scio', a Greek girl was rescued and brought to Malta where Lady Erroll adopted her. Her name was Statira Livadostro and 'repaid her foster mother's care by a warm affection'. She afterwards married Capt. Hope of the 7th Fusiliers.(15)

JOHN HOOKHAM FRERE (No. 149)

John Hookham Frere, English diplomat and author, was born in London in 1769. He was educated at Eton, where he met Canning, and at Caius College Cambridge. He entered public service in the Foreign Office under Lord Grenville, and sat from 1796 to 1802 as Member of Parliament for the close Borough of West Looe in Cornwall. He and Canning were ardent supporters of Pitt, and contributors to the Anti-Jacobin, a weekly paper started to ridicule the French republicans and to denounce their brutal rapacity and cruelty. On Canning's removal to the Board of Trade in 1799 he succeeded him as Under-Secretary of State. In October 1800 he was appointed envoy extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Lisbon, and in September 1802 he was transferred to Madrid, where he remained for two years. He was made a Member of the Privy Council in 1805. In 1807 he was appointed plenipotentiary at Berlin, but the mission was abandoned, and Frere was again sent to Spain in 1808 as plenipotentiary to the Central Junta. The condition of Spain rendered his position a very responsible and difficult one. When Napolean began to advance on Madrid, Frere wholeheartedly advised Sir John Moore not to retreat. After the battle at Corunna, public opinion accused Frere of having endangered the army, and he was recalled. Thus ended Frere's public life.

In 1816 he married Elizabeth Jemima, Dowager Countess of Erroll, and in 1820, on account of her failing health, he went with her to the Mediterranean. There he finally settled in Malta, where they lived the rest of their lives. He died at Pietā on 7 January 1846 and his house still stands there to this day. Frere's literary reputation now rests entirely upon his spirited verse translations of Aristophanes, which remain in many ways unrivalled. The translations of The Acharnians, The Knights, The Birds and The Frogs were privately printed and were first brought to general notice in 1847. Frere's complete works were published in 1871 by his nephews, William E. Frere and Sir Henry Bartle Frere, K.C.B the latter a distinguished statesman and administrator who also wrote the memoir of his uncle.

John Hookham Frere's tomb was sculpted by Darmanin, a sculptor who, with his sons was to carve several of the monuments in the cemetery. It was erected at a cost of £17.16s.10d. It bears the following inscription at the back of the one to his wife:-

'Prae honorabilis vir Joannis Hookham Frere/ab ingenua stirpe in agro Britannorum Norfolciensis oriundus/regii ablegati munere in Lusitania eodemque una et altera vice in Hispania egregie perfunctus/Melitam denique uxoris sua valetudinis causa se recepit atque ibi XXV annos commoratus est/ hic cultu literarum quas semper in deliciis habuerat senectutem ablectans/(Minime interea suorum immemor) eruditionis commercio peritos familiaris vero et advenas comitate et hospitalitate pauperas etiam largissima munificentia ita sibi devixerat ut interituseius publica quaedem calamitas fuisse videtur/ et nomen post se reliquerit pia omnium amorem prosequendum/quod faxit Deus in vitae quoque sempiternae libro ob Christi merita inscriptum/ reperiatur/ natus est londini XXI Mensis Maii MDCCLXIX obiit VII mensis Jan. MDCCCXLVI'

In 1942 the monument was damaged but repaired in 1962 thanks to the intervention of Dr Donald Sultana who had persuaded the acting Governor, Archie Campbell to have it repaired.

SUSANNA FRERE. (No. 151)

The sister of J. H. Frere. Her inscription read:
Joannis Frere et Joannae Hookham
filia nata die Conversionis Sancti Pauli anno 1777

cum per complures annos in hac insula commorans pictatis et caritatis singulare exemplus praebuisset ad meliorem vitam transit die Januarii 18, anno 1839
J.H.Frere defunctae frater moerens posuit.

At the back of the monument is a poem especially composed and sent from London by her brother Bartle:

Farewell, blest spirit, not for thee the tear
Steals down this furrow'd cheek - unscathed hast thou
Life's thorny path of sin and sorrow trod;
But well may they, who to thy heart were dear
Mourn for themselves unblam'd; yet mourning, bow
With humble resignation to the rod.
Thy birth befell upon the hallow'd day
When burst th' ineffable light upon the Jew
Of Tarsus, and affirm'd the call divine.
Upon that rock is cast thy coil of clay
Where from his arm the great Apostle threw Unharm'd the venomous beast. What fitter shrine
For her whose course through life was ever true
To the aspiration which the zeal accords
Of the new convert, those heart-breathing words
'Who art thou Lord?' What wouldst thou have me do?' B.Frere.

JOHN GLIDDON (No. 166)
'Many years consul of the US of America at Cairo Egypt
died at Valletta 3 July 1844 in his 60th year.
I know that my Redeemer liveth and he shall stand on the latter day upon the earth, and though after my skin-worms destroy this body yet in my flesh shall I see God whom I shall see for myself and mine eyes shall behold, and not another. Job XIX 25, 26, 27.

SIR HENRY HOTHAM (No. 222)
In the Upper Barracca Garden is a bust of Sir Henry by either a Danish sculptor Bertel Thorwaldsen or the Maltese Ferdinando Dimech, though his remains are in the Msida Bastion Cemetery. He died suddenly in 1833 at the peak of his career as a Vice Admiral and Commander in Chief of the Mediterranean. While he was being buried with full military honours, the flag on his last command, the Alfred, was hauled down.

Sir Henry was born in 1777, the youngest son of 2nd Lord Hotham. He entered the Navy in 1790 and served under Admirals Howe, Rodney and Hood before he went on to achieve Naval fame when he commanded HMS Northumberland. In January 1812, he was ordered to intercept French ships that were harrying ships of Britain, Spain, Portugal and the United States. On 8 or 10 January, The Northumberland intercepted, off Lorient, The French frigates Arienne and Andromaque and a brig Mamelouck. Despite considerable damage, the Northumberland managed to force the three ships aground and with the help of a British brig, Growler that arrived later in the day, the three French ships were completely destroyed.

In 1815 he was made a KCB, Lord of the Admiralty in 1822, in 1825 a Vice Admiral and appointed Commander in Chief in the Mediterranean in 1831. He married Lady Frances Anne Juliana, eldest daughter of 1st Earl of Stradbroke in 1816. He was survived by 3 sons and 1 daughter.

(Note; By order in Council dated 9 July 1864, the division of the Fleet into Red, White and Blue Squadrons was discontinued and a uniform flag adopted)

HENRY KING (No. 257)
"Sacred to the memory of Captain J. (sic) King, 21st Royal Scots Fusiliers, drowned off Fort Ricasoli. After having been by God's mercy preserved from death at the Siege of Sevastopol, Alma, Balaclava and Inkerman, in which last battle he was dangerously wounded, he was drowned while bathing off Fort Ricasoli. March 28, 1857, Aetat: 23"

RICHARD A. FORTESCUE NORTHY. (No. 349)
This inscription records the feelings of the parents of Richard Fortescue Northy. The 'monument was erected by his brother officers as a testimony of esteem.'
"His disconsolated parents wishing to commemorate the virtues of the best of sons of him who was their pride and comfort and who never gave them a pang until they had to deplore his irreparable loss have caused the following lines to be added:- Ingenious, open, free from every guile his generous heart no selfish feeling knew. His mind reflecting in his face, his smile proclaimed him gentle, courteous, candid true. How early loss, how short the warning given. In pride of youth and strength immortal soared. His spotless spirit of his kindred heaven. By none he left excelled, by all deplored."

LIEUT-GENERAL the RT. HON. SIR HENRY POTTINGER (No.372)
Sir Henry Pottinger was born at Mount Pottinger, co. Down in Ireland on 3 October 1789. He was the 5th son of Eldred Curwen Pottinger, a descendent of the Pottingers of Berkshire. He was educated at Belfast Academy but left at age 12 to go to sea. In 1804 he became attached to the British Army in India and during the next 35 years served successively as Collector of Ahmadnagar, Resident of Cutch, and Resident of Sind. In 1840 he was appointed envoy and plenipotentiary to China, a war having broken out between Britain and that country over the opium trade. At the conclusion of this war in 1842, Pottinger was responsible for the drawing up of the Treaty of Nanking, the terms of which included the cession of Hong Kong to Britain. He was made Governor and Commander in Chief of Hong Kong in 1843, the first to hold that office under British rule. He held the Governorship for a year and subsequently served for a short time as Governor of the Cape of Good Hope (1846-47). In August 1847 he was appointed Governor of Madras, where he remained until 1854. Sir Henry died in Malta on 18 March 1856.
In 1820 he married Susanna Maria daughter of Capt. Richard Cooke of Dublin. They had 3 sons and 1 daughter.

ALEXANDER SHIPPARD (No. 426)
He was the youngest son of Alexander Shippard, a Purser in the Navy, and his wife Margaret Walkinshaw and entered the Navy in 1786. He was promoted Lieutenant in 1793. He served with Nelson in HMS Vanguard in 1798. He became a Rear Admiral in 1838. He received a pension for " Meritorious service". He married Jane, daughter of Admiral Sir John Knight KCB and was survived by several children.

THOMAS SIBSON (No. 430)
Born in Cumberland in 1817, the son of Francis and Jane Sibson, he grew up in the house of an uncle in Manchester. He came to London in 1838 to "devote himself to a life of Art". He produced a series of etchings of scenes in Charles Dickens works, " the dramatic power and humour of which were as remarkable as their artistic skill". He subsequently designed the illustrations to the Abbotsford edition of the Waverley novels and other publications. In 1842 he went to Munich to study under Kaulbach, but was forced by poor health to return in 1844. In the autumn he sailed for the Mediterranean intending to winter in the South but died at Malta. An album of his work was later presented to the British Museum. (See Cumbria Family History Society, NL41 p16, NL38 p20.)

MIKIEL ANTON VASSALLI (?)

Whilst there is controversy as to the whereabouts of his grave, the facts of his life are known and on the basis that he might have been buried in the Msida bastion, they are included here. He was born at Zebbug on 15 March 1764, the son of Grabiel and Katerina Vassallo. When he published the first Maltese grammar in Latin in 1791, the name became Vassalli. His parents were able to give him some education, possibly towards becoming a priest, but by the age of 26 he is found in Rome where he studied a number of languages as he 'set about examining the structure of the Maltese language and fashioning an alphabet, making a grammar and compiling a Maltese dictionary' (published in 1795). He also taught languages there. In 1795 on returning to Malta, he petitioned the then Grand Master De Rohan to allow him to open a school.

However by 1797, the political situation in Europe was in turmoil and The Knights were left with a substantial reduction in their income. Vassalli fired up with ideas about improving the islands administration became the head of a band of Maltese patriots. He wrote a memorial to the Order in order to rescue the islands from collapse. He proposed three reforms:- a Maltese Langue, abandoning the vow to fight Mohammedans and opening the port to trade with the east. This was rejected and Vassalli joined the French party, became head of the Maltese society of Jacobins and with his compatriots set about planning a revolution. It was discovered, Vassalli was tried, found guilty of treason and imprisoned on 12 June 1797 in Fort Ricasoli. He was released in June 1798 (some say smuggled out) and landed at Salerno.

His next recorded appearance is Adjutant of the Maltese National Guard in 1799 in the French administration that was occupying the islands. He may well have landed with his co conspirator Censu Barbara. With the British now laying siege to Valletta, Vassalli along with 200 others left Valletta for the country on 28 September 1799. He was seized and imprisoned on 'suspicion that he was in league with the Enemy'. By decree on 10 September 1800, he was sentenced to perpetual exile and left on 15 January 1801 at the age of 37. He first went to Tunis, then Spain and finally France where he lived for 20 years in some poverty, meeting Katerina Formosa de Fremaux and having a son born in Marseilles in 1814.

In 1820 he appears in Malta again with Catherine and three children, penniless, giving French lessons seemingly without opposition. In 1821 Hookham Frere (see above) as Chairman of the University Council proposed to establish a school for the Maltese language. This was accepted and Vassalli was appointed as master financially supported by Frere. In 1825 he prepared a new edition in Italian of the Maltese grammar. In 1828, Maltese proverbs and an Italian Maltese dictionary were published.

In 1823 he had been commissioned by the Rev Jowett of the Anglican Church Missionary Society to translate the Gospels into Maltese. There were many difficulties in raising the necessary finance, obtaining the right type face and arranging proof reading when the printing was done in England, especially as by 1829, his health was failing.

He died on 12 January 1829 at the age of 65 of dry gangrene. The relationship with the mother of his children was not recognized by the curia in Malta and he was denied a Catholic burial. Accordingly 'it is clear that his burial took place in some part or other of one of the English cemeteries which lie under the Floriana bastions looking towards the Lazzaretto..'(4)

It appears no grave stone was ever erected, but Schlienz with whom he had worked on the gospels had drafted an epitaph ..'meritoriously distinguished for cultivating the Maltese language and reducing it to grammatical system.'

His wife and children were left destitute and petitioned the Church Missionary Society to help them. When she died, it is claimed, 23.11.86 (12) that 'his wife Catherine de Fremaux was buried in the Msida Bastion Cemetery', though no record has been found. In 1987 a bronze statue was erected at Zebbug, his birthplace. In the Msida Bastion Cemetery a plaque was erected which said, translated from the Maltese,
'Remembrance of the Burial of Mikiel Anton Vassalli
patriot writer and Linguist
Zebbug 5th of March 1764
Pieta 12th of January 1829
at that time
the foreigners respected him more

REV GEORGE WAGNER (No. 494)
George Wagner established a home for girls which by 1855 had 37 residents. The girls were employed in domestic duties round the house and during their stay made a complete set of wearing apparel which they were allowed to keep 'if their conduct had been satisfactory'. Much time and attention was given to the Christian religion. His health was never good and he had frequently been abroad for his chest infections. On 29 October 1856 he left Marseilles for Malta and settled at Dunsfords Royal Hotel in the Strada Forni in Valletta. In January 1857 his consumption reached an advanced stage and the doctor, unable to tell him of his situation because of deafness, wrote a long statement. George Wagner immediately wrote to his father instructing him to sell £1000 of securities to give to the home for female penitents. He died on 10 February 1857 at the age of 39 and on his grave was the inscription 'To be with Christ is far better.' A memorial was also erected by the congregation of his church at St Stephen's, Brighton.

WALTER RODWELL WRIGHT (No. 529)
Walter Rodwell Wright has puzzled researchers as the inscription about him appears not only in the Msida, but also in Ta'Braxia and indeed even the Quarantine (McGill's guide published in 1839). The inscription was designed by John Hookham Frere who was a fellow member of his Lodge of St John and St. Paul.
'To the memory of Brother Walter Rodwell Wright of the county of Suffolk
PGM of the Mediterranean and founder of the lodge of St. John and St. Paul at Malta. President of the HM High Court of Appeal and senior member of the Supreme Council of Justice in this island.
Early distinguished for high literary attainments and through his life for uniform benevolence and a strict sense of honour he secured to himself the confidence and goodwill of the population of this island and the respect and esteem of the British fellow country man

Died on April 20 1826
Bonus atque fidus
Judex honestissimus praetulit utili
This monument is erected by the Lodge of St.John and St.
Paul to mark their deep sense of departed worth.'

He had joined the Prince of Wales Lodge (then no.412) on 18 December 1801 and three years later was elected Grand Master of the Order of the Red Cross in England. At that time, he was described as 'a most distinguished Mason and a personal friend of the Dukes of Kent and Sussex.' (8, A.M.Broadley, The History of Freemasonry in the District of Malta).

After a spell as British Consul in the Ionian Islands, he arrived in Malta in 1815 and lived for a time in the Bishop's house. He presided over the first Masonic Lodge in Malta.

Many of those who are buried in the cemetery are children, and their graves often carry poetic inscriptions. Some are touching, some amusing, nearly all bear the hallmark of Victorian values tinged with sentimentality. This is a good example:

READERS
You all do know (as she did once) the cot, where first the breath of Infant life you drew,
but where your mortal dust may rest,
the spot to God alone is left, and not to you

The sculptors art was shown to full effect in some of their magnificent tombs. Sometimes their spelling was no match: 'Repent dear friends while you have time. Death took me of (sic) just in time' (No.187. S. Hadfield)

There are many scriptural verses, quoting from the Bible as well as composed poetry on a religious theme:- 'The Blood of Christ for thee hath done
Its everlasting work of love
For thee thy dying Lord hath won
A crown of Life, a throne above
Then fare thee well, we part to meet
On yonder bright celestian shore
Where union will indeed be sweet
For we shall meet to part no more (No.234. HM Innes)

APPENDIX E

The Quarantine Bastion Cemetery

Whilst the research was primarily focussed on the MBC, details of other cemeteries were gathered along the way. The Quarantine Bastion Cemetery overlooked the quarantine harbour where ships disembarked passengers in the Lazzaretto on Manoel island for some days to check they brought no disease from the east. Above the Bastion was a chapel, called St. Rocco where a priest would say mass for those across the water in quarantine. Below were the St Rocco baths.

The cemetery survived up to World War II during which it sustained some damage. After the war the Government engaged a contractor to remove the rubble from the war damaged Valletta and dump it on the inner part of Pietà where the sea came in much further than it does today. It appears that the contractor became tired of dumping the rubble at Pieta and began dumping it on the site of the Quarantine Bastion Cemetery, thus largely covering the remaining monuments. Protests were raised by some of the residents of Floriana, but the Government sought to smooth matters over by promising to cover the site with soil, followed by planting of trees. This was done, but later the site was largely cleared to make way for the Excelsior hotel.

The following names were identified as being buried in the Quarantine Bastion Cemetery:- (see Sunday Times of Malta, 1.1.39. p.8 (STOM), Papers of Harry Formosa, Malta University Library (HF).

BROCK, William George (11.8.65
Aged 4. Died of Cholera(HF)
BROCK, Louisa (14.8.65)
Aged 7 years 11 months. Died of Cholera(HF)
BROCK, Kesia(or Kezia) (13.8.65)
Wife of Walter Brock, aged 33. Died of Cholera(HF)
Note. The above were members of Walter Brocks family. He survived the Cholera outbreak, but was later buried in the same vault.
CAMPBELL Robert. (?)
Capt. HMS Trident(STOM)
JEREMIE, John (?)
Advocate of the Royal Court of Guernsey.(STOM)
LLOYD, Merycke (1806)
Midshipman of HMS Sirius, wounded in action and died. Buried 14 May.(HF,STOM)
LOYD, Daniel (1807)
Late Carpenter of HMS Resistance(STOM)
MAITLAND, Robert. (1801)
Midshipman of HMS Penelope, son of the late Hon. Capt. Maitland. Age 18(STOM)
MORRISON, John (1807)
Quartermaster aboard HMS Amphion. Buried 18 March.(HF,STOM)
MURRAY, General Thomas (1816)
aged 67(STOM)
PASCOE, Thomas (1857)
Captain of 'Empire Queen' of Liverpool
PROUT, John (1852)
Master Mariner aged 34. Buried 26 December(STOM)
ST. JOHN, Mary Susan (1822)

Daughter of R W St. John, Treasurer of this island, aged 13 months. Buried 25 June.(STOM)
STEWART, the Hon. Lady Georgina (1804)
5th daughter of the Earl of Galloway. Buried 15 April(HF,STOM)

In the Malta Penny Magazine of 31 October 1840, several inscriptions were cited. In all probability they relate to inscriptions in the Quarantine Bastion Cemetery. They are quoted here as examples of contemporary inscriptions.
In an article in the Times of Malta, Guze Cassar Pullicino, 10.5.87 (12) quotes an 1827 description of the cemetery where the quality of the verse is much criticized '..Whilst perusing the inscriptions so liberally scattered around I could not help reflecting that whilst many were of a pious and judicious nature, still some offended woefully against grammar, taste, common sense and religion...I think it would be a judicious regulation if all epitathian (sic) inscriptions were submitted to the judgement of some competent person previous to being placed in a cemetery'.

MATTINSON, 80th Regt,
The King of Kings a warrant sealed and sent it out by death and charged him to serve the same upon my feeble breath

DODD, 80th Regt.
How frail our bliss on life's uncertain coast
How vain our trust in all beneath the pole
From care to care with friendliness anguish toast
Till in the eternal boundless sea we roll

KERRY, 80th Regt.
Where shall rest be found
Rest for the weary soul
Twere vain the ocean depths to sound
Or pierce to either pole
the world can never give the bliss for which we sigh
It is not all of life to live
Nor all of death to die

EVANS, 80TH REGT
Why do you mourn departing friends or sink at death's alarms
Tis but the voice which Jesus sends
To call us to our friends
Why should we trouble to convey
Their bodies to the tombs
There the dear flesh of Jesus lay
And left a sweet perfume.

CARR, 85th Regt.
To God I made my humble moan
With trouble quite oppressed
And he relieved me from my straits
And granted my request
Since therefore God did on my side

so graciously appear,
Why should the vain attempts of man
Possess my soul with fear?

FROST, 80th Regt.
Vital spark of heavenly flame,
Quit o quit this mortal frame.
Trembling, hoping, lingering, flying,
Oh the pain the bliss of dying;
Cease fond nature, cease thy strife,
and let me languish into life.

CORBETT, 80th Regt.
Every tear is wiped away,
Sighs no more shall heave his breast,
Night is lost in endless day,
Sorrow in eternal rest.

AUSTIN, 95th Regt
Rejoice for a brother deceased,
Our loss is his infinite gain;
A soul's out of prison released
And freed from its bodily pain.

WILLIS, 80TH
I am billeted here by death alone
In hopes of Angels to guard me to the throne
The trumpet sounds to victory's arms
Where soldiers must bid adieu to war's alarms

CRANFIELD, Robert.
'BY A MOTHER'
Deaths shafts fly quick oh you be wise,
Here Robert Cranfield lowly lies
Cut off when manhood did first appear
Just ending his twenty second year
Here young and old together lie
Pause traveller as thou passest by
Glance but your eye on all around
Many instances will here be found
Of them laid in an untimely grave
Whom Gallen's sons strove in vain to save.

BY A DISCONSOLATE HUSBAND
Blest soul sure thou art fled
Into the numbers of the dead
Why should mine eyes
Let fall unfruitful tears
The offspring of despair and fears
To intercept their obsequies
But sure thou art gone
Farewell, sleep, take thy rest
Upon a better husbands breast

Until the resurrection come!!!

- A French woman, wife of a soldier in the Rifle Brigade
- Wife of an American Missionary.

The following Army Regiments were represented in this cemetery:-
49th Royal Berkshire.
23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers.
95th Sherwood Foresters.
35th Royal Sussex Regiment.
68th Durham Light Infantry.
44th Essex Regiment.
8th King's regiment (Liverpool).
East Kent Militia.
3rd Buffs.
East Sussex Regiment.
5th Battalion Royal Artillery.

A large tomb was erected by the East Sussex Regiment in memory of 7 Sergeants, 4 Corporals, 5 Drummers, 129 Privates, 20 Women and 33 Children who died during the Regiments' stay in the island during the years 1851 - 1854.

There are several Gunners and Drivers from Captain A. Tylee's Company. 5th Batt. Royal Artillery, buried about 1853.

APPENDIX F

The Greek Orthodox Cemetery

Close by the Msida Bastion Cemetery, there was a Greek Orthodox Cemetery. It is opposite the Public Library. (See Appendix C.) The following are identified as being buried there:-

'Here lie the remains of Catherine Hankey, wife of Col. the Hon. Sir Frederick Hankey, KCMG, chief secretary to the Government. She died on 26th May, 1833 aged 38.'

'A Greek woman, a traveller(1) here, wife of Nikolas Hieropoulos(2), daughter of Paschale Georgios (2), two excellent merchants of Syra (3), (aged) barely twenty-four years, ill fated mother of three children, glorious in name and deed, covered by the darkness of lamentable fate. Melita, 12 April, 1853 (4).'

Notes.

This was translated from the Greek by Anne Shortland-Jones.

1) This might mean 'a visitor to Malta' or 'a traveller in this vale of tears'.
2) Hieropoulos or Hieropolou and Georgios or Georgiou are equally possible forms.
3) Syra is the capital of the island of Syros and was the capital of Greece at one time in the 19th Century.
4) 12th April might mean 23rd April by the western calendar.
